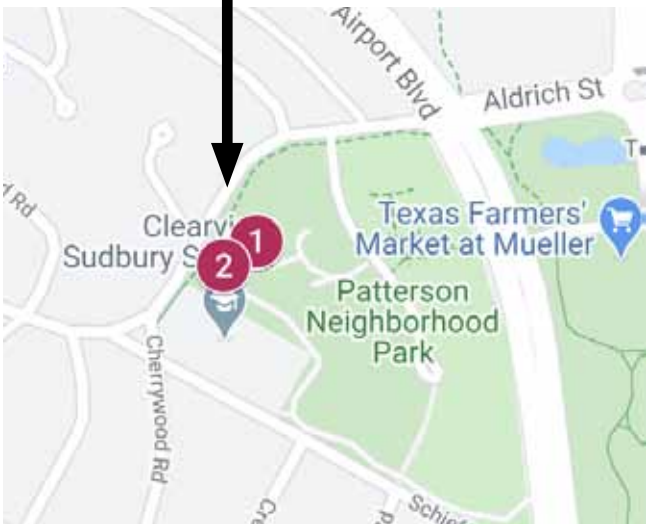
Emily Lee

9:45

Parts one and two

Patterson Park

May 22, 2020



Part one

30.2966˚
-97.7112˚

soda fired foraged clay from North Carolina, pearlite

1. Something about how if you find it it won't be as gratifying as if you didn't and then had to cope

2. I sincerely hope it's still there when this is over, I'd like to have this one back, not because it's the best, but because I had forgotten about it for a few years, and I need to make up for that even though it doesn't deal in forgivenesses, and because I think it's prettier than I used to back when I thought it was part of a necklace

3. It's in a tree, shooting breezes, acting natural

Part two

30.2966˚
-97.7112˚

discarded canvas drop cloth from a blue chip art gallery, cut into the dimensions of two- by-fours, sewn end-to- end, looped

1. The park by my house, not quite Mueller but almost

2. He showed me these rocks I'd been at before, they're set up like an audience

3. They face the bathrooms

4. They're pedestals for people but usually and in fact always without the people