Left in Leaves is a group show of interventions across the city of Austin freely left in outdoor public spaces between May 1 and 31st.

Documentation will be shared on the Northern-Southern website and social media. Maps to the sites will be available upon request.

At the conclusion of the month, the maps will be collected in a print 'zine, in which each artist will be interviewed.

N-S's programing is sponsored in part by the City of Austin's Cultural Arts Commission instructions for the viewer visit the landmark pictured in the link above. look for a bit of trash on the asphalt in the general area and stare at it while simultaneously focusing on the ambient sounds occurring. after a few moments to minutes of taking this experience in, text 512-699-8168 with a description of the trash and sounds.

you will receive a text and/or call no more than 10 minutes after you text me your descriptions of the trash and sounds.

please wait at the site for my text and/or call to complete the work.

make sure to bring ear buds.

if there is no trash on the street to focus on when you visit, consider the work destroyed.

Shelter in A Place

May 11, 2020

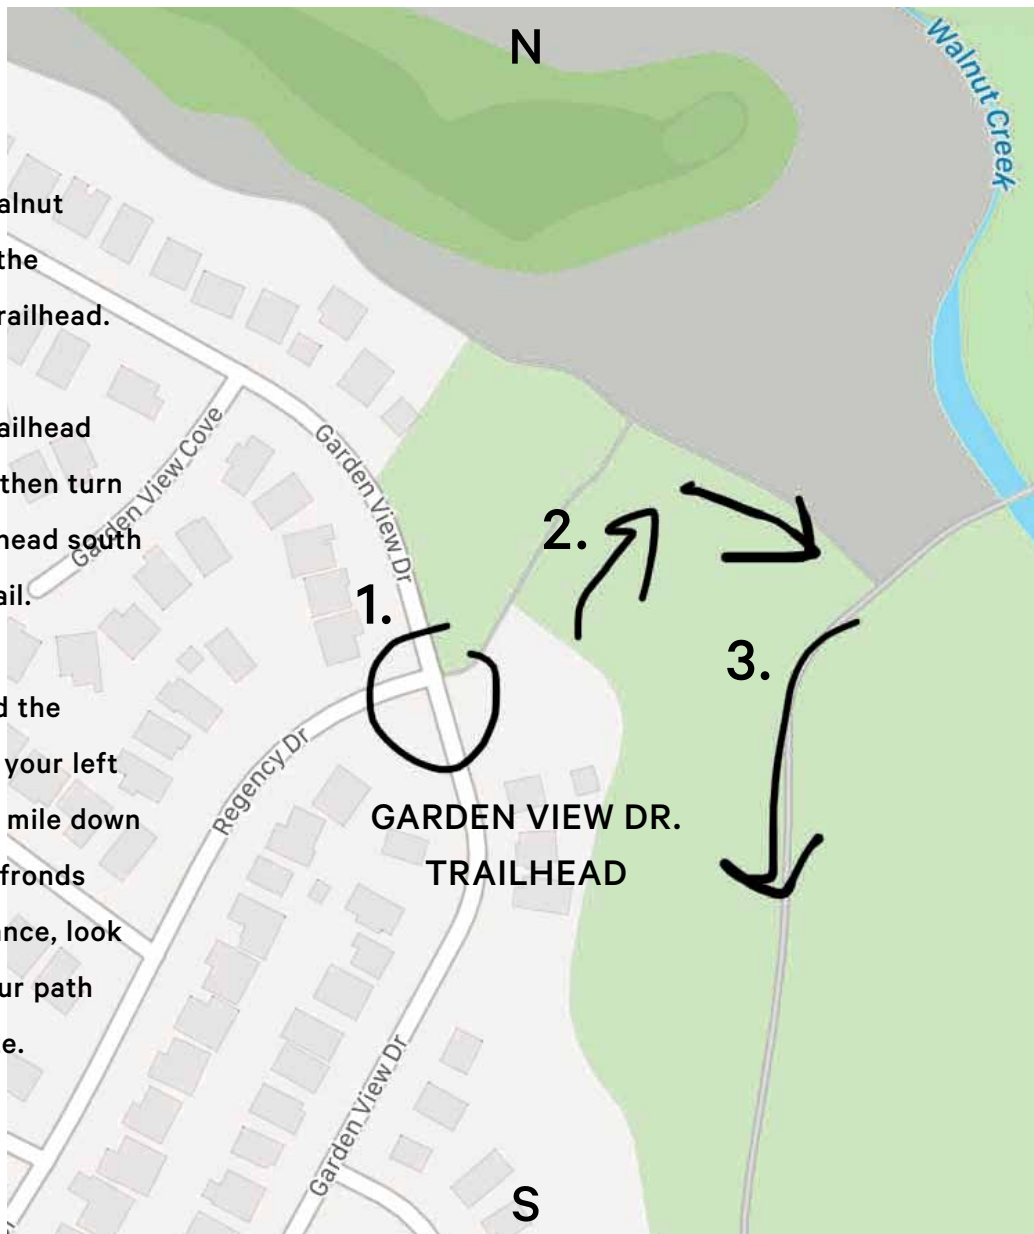

Shelter in A Place is located on the southern Walnut Creek Trail, closest to the YMCA access point or the Garden View Dr. Trailhead. Head south on the main trail and look for the hanging palm fronds.

Walnut Creek Trail is wheelchair accessible.

1. Enter the Walnut Creek Trail at the Garden View trailhead.

2. From the trailhead turn right and then turn right again to head south on the main trail.

3. You will find the installation on your left roughly .3 of a mile down the trail, palm fronds mark the entrance, look closely and your path with materialize.

Harmony in Incongruity

East 6th Street and Waller

May 17, 2020

Amy Scofield:

"Many years ago I pulled over on my bike near an abandoned building on East 6th, the former Uptown Sports Club. I happened to look up at where a steel column met the awning and saw that someone had suspended half a pair of scissors from a nail. I marveled at that gesture and like to think that whoever put it there, maybe decades ago, and I were the only ones who knew about it. I decided that when I finally move away, I'd go snatch it as a memento."

"When I was doing my first Left In Leaves intervention in the alley behind it, I learned that Aaron Franklin was going to open a sandwich shop on the site. I thought, I have a ladder with me, I better grab that half a scissor!"

"I've replaced it with another item that's also ineffective without its other half."

Scofield transformed a wire meant to prevent birds from roosting into a sparkly garland.

She writes:

"I went over there in the dark on Saturday night, and spent about an hour, lighting the trail in both directions so no one would run into the ladder in the middle of the trail. I was surprised how many folks were riding in the dark- including 4,5 bike cops who said 'how's it going?' and 'cool' as they rode right by when I said 'just a little guerilla art project!'"

Walnut Creek trail behind Govalle Park

Enter the South Walnut Creek trail off of Jain Lane, behind Govalle Park.

Walk approximately 790 steps until you see a yellow indicator, marking a side path. 50 steps into the woods, you will happen upon a second indicator on your left. Turn left and there you are.

100 Hugs

May 21, 2020

100 wearable hugs from unused vinyl from signs from canceled ATX festival's bar signage. They are in two locations, one west in Allendale and one east in the Boggy Creek Greenbelt.

The hugs are free for the taking for a week.

Wyss writes:

"At a time when humans aren't getting any friendly touches, these are touches made for sharing. Its an offering. A hug. You just have to come get it."

"There's a variety of shapes and sizes out there. Some hugs wrap around your neck more than once and some just sit over your shoulders gently. If the hug gets snug around your neck when wearing it, just remember that the best hugs come with a tight squeeze."
